Using Prompt Engineering to Draft an Interview Confirmation Email

Task 1: Prompt to Generate a Professional Email

The following prompt was written to instruct the LLM to generate a professional interview confirmation email, explicitly specifying the required content elements:

Write a professional email to the HR team confirming my attendance at an upcoming job interview. The email should:

- Accept the interview invitation
- Confirm the proposed date and time (Thursday, July 17, 2026, at 2:00 PM)
- Include a brief thank-you note for the opportunity

Keep the tone professional and courteous, and keep the email concise.

Task 2: Generated Email Output

Running the prompt above produced the following email:

This version includes all three required elements: acceptance, date/time confirmation, and a thank-you note.

Subject: Interview Confirmation – [Your Name]

Dear HR Team,

Thank you for inviting me to interview for the position. I'm happy to confirm that I will attend the interview on Thursday, July 17, 2026, at 2:00 PM as proposed.

I appreciate the opportunity and look forward to speaking with you.

Best regards,
[Your Name]

Task 3: Improving the Prompt for a More Formal Tone

The prompt was refined to explicitly request a higher level of formality, including guidance on salutation, vocabulary, and sign-off style:

Write a highly formal, professional email to the HR team confirming my attendance at an upcoming job interview. The email should:

- Formally accept the interview invitation
- Confirm the proposed date and time (Thursday, July 17, 2026, at 2:00 PM)
- Include a sincere, formal expression of gratitude for the opportunity

Use formal business English throughout: address the recipient formally, avoid contractions (e.g., use "I am" instead of "I'm"), use a respectful, polished sign-off such as "Yours sincerely," and maintain a businesslike, courteous tone from greeting to closing.

Final Formal Email Output

Notably more formal in tone, vocabulary, and structure

Subject: Confirmation of Interview Attendance – [Your Name]

Dear Hiring Team,

I am writing to formally confirm my attendance at the interview for the position, scheduled for Thursday, July 17, 2026, at 2:00 PM. I am pleased to accept this invitation and confirm my availability at the stated date and time.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude for this opportunity and look forward to the discussion.

Yours sincerely,
[Your Name]

Tone Comparison: Initial vs. Improved Prompt

Aspect	Initial (Standard Professional)	Improved (More Formal)
Salutation	"Dear [Name],"	"Dear Mr./Ms. [Last Name]," with full formal address
Word choice	Everyday professional language ("Thanks so much", "I'm happy to confirm")	Elevated, formal vocabulary ("I am writing to formally confirm", "I would like to express my sincere gratitude")
Sentence structure	Shorter, more direct sentences	Longer, more structured sentences with formal transitions
Sign-off	"Best regards,"	"Yours sincerely," or "Respectfully,"
Overall tone	Warm and professional, slightly conversational	Polished, formal, and businesslike throughout

The comparison illustrates how explicit tone instructions in a prompt directly shape the LLM's word choice, sentence structure, and overall register — moving the same core message from a warm, professional email to a distinctly formal, businesslike one.

Expected Output

A professional interview confirmation email that accepts the invitation, confirms the date and time, and includes a thank-you note — demonstrated above in both a standard professional tone and a more formal register.
